Context

The disparate health and economic impacts of the ongoing pandemic and the tragic deaths of George Floyd, Ahmaud Arbery, Breonna Taylor and so many more have exposed even further the systemic racism and long-standing racial inequities that are deeply ingrained in our society. It is now estimated that the U.S. gross domestic product has lost $16 trillion in the last 20 years due to discriminatory practices against black and brown Americans.¹

Systemic racism and racial inequity is also starkly visible in our transportation infrastructure, when highways have been favored over transit lines, when communities underserved by transit are also the communities most in need of affordable transportation options and when our essential workforce is also the one most dependent on an “essential” service such as transit.

It is imperative that APTA and the transit industry reassess our role and responsibility in ensuring racial equity² and acknowledge that we can and must do more.

As an association, this means ensuring that we support our members with tools to measure and recognize progress on racial equity, provide leadership in educational programming and resources, support workforce development from a racial equity perspective and leverage our advocacy tools and partnerships.

For APTA members representing the transit industry from both the public and private sectors, this means ensuring that transit is central to the protection and restoration of community, that we take this moment to transform underserved communities’ access to resources and opportunities, that everyone has a fair and just means of mobility and that we engage with our workforce and our transit ridership in a way that is culturally-sensitive, authentic and responsive.

2. Racial equity is the condition that would be achieved if one's racial identity no longer predicted, in a statistical sense, how one fares. Racial equity is viewed as one part of racial justice, and thus also includes work to address root causes of inequities not just their manifestation. This includes elimination of policies, practices, attitudes and cultural messages that reinforce differential outcomes by race or fail to eliminate them. Executive Summary

The APTA Racial Equity Action Plan sets out where we can and must act as an association and how we best engage and support APTA members in their racial equity efforts. The aim is to create truly transformational change within the transit industry and support the planning and operations of public transportation services from a racial equity and mobility justice perspective through explicitly anti-racist policies and ideas.3

The action plan outlines five key goals and accompanying areas for action:

1. Measure and recognize progress on racial equity in the transit industry, providing APTA members with a tangible roadmap for advancing racial equity as part of a comprehensive equity framework within and for their organizations;

2. Offer the necessary training, technical support and resources to individuals and member organizations to develop practices, policies and programs that support racial justice and equity;

3. Create more mentorship, sponsorship and engagement opportunities for transit students, transit professionals and transit businesses;

4. Be a more influential advocacy force for equity and transit, promoting inclusion and diversity in the composition of executive leadership at transit agencies, the businesses that provide transit-related goods and services and their respective board of directors and equity in the delivery of transit-related goods and services, and;

5. Implement impact-oriented partnerships with organizations dedicated to equity, diversity and inclusion that is supportive of the goals and mission of APTA and its Racial Equity Action Plan.

The APTA Racial Equity Action Plan has been developed by the APTA Diversity and Inclusion Council’s Racial Equity Working Group as part of a broader mandate to proactively create and maintain a diverse, inclusive and equitable environment within the association and across the industry. This action plan is not only integral, but a priority element of APTA’s Diversity and Inclusion Strategic Plan, which has been in place since October 2017.

APTA’s Diversity and Inclusion Strategic Plan underscores the inclusion of differences and similarities from all categories of members regardless of ability, gender, gender identity, sexual orientation, age, ethnicity, race and geographic origin, size of transit property or business member organization, all of which contribute to the fulfillment of APTA’s mission. Racial equity is therefore approached through an intersectional4 lens.

3. Anti-racism is defined as the work to actively oppose racism by advocating for changes in political, economic, and social life. An anti-racist idea is any idea that suggests racial groups are equals in all of their apparent difference and that there is nothing wrong with any racial group. Antiracists argue that racist policies are the cause of racial inequity, Source: How to Be An Anti-Racist, Ibram X. Kendi. One World, 2019, p. 24.

4. Merriam-Webster dictionary defines intersectionality, as the complex, cumulative way in which the effects of multiple forms of discrimination (such as racism, sexism, homophobia, and classism) combine, overlap, or intersect especially in the experiences of marginalized individuals or groups. – Merriam-Webster’s Collegiate Dictionary. April 2017, Merriam-Webster Incorporated.
