From 1914 to today

HOW THE TRANSIT SAFETY AWARD WAS ESTABLISHED

Anthony Nicholas Brady was an American businessman who used his genius at consolidation to acquire control of Brooklyn Rapid Transit as well Albany Gas Light Company. Later he was a dominant figure in the transportation systems of several American cities including Philadelphia and Washington, D.C. Brady would acquire significant investments in a substantial number of companies and partnered with leading East Coast business tycoons such as Thomas Edison, William C. Whitney, P. A. B. Widener and Thomas F. Ryan in various business ventures including the Electric Vehicle Co., initially a motorized taxicab business that evolved into Maxwell Automobile Co. Anthony N. Brady died in 1913. In his honor, the family of Anthony N. Brady authorized the American Museum of Safety to award a gold medal annually to the American electric railway company which during the year had done the most to conserve the safety and health of the public and its employees. The American Museum of Safety secured the cooperation of the American Electric Railway Association (APTA's predecessor) to appoint a committee from their own membership to formulate the conditions of competition.

The Anthony N. Brady Memorial Medals

Evidences are daily coming to the Museum of an awakened interest on the part of great industrialists to introduce measures of safety for the protection not alone of their own workers, but also of the public. Their inquiry is, "what can we do to make our industry a safer place to work in and our community a safer place to live in?"

The Anthony N. Brady Memorial Medal, to be awarded annually by the Museum to the American Electric Street Railway which has done the most during the current year for the prevention of accidents to the public and to its own employees, is a further indication of this new spirit permeating the world of industry. The effect of these awards can not fail to awaken the interest of those roads which have not yet realized their obligation to the community and will stimulate others to increased effort in the conservation of human life. All this will mean a more favorable public opinion.

TO AWARD BRADY MEDALS.

American Museum of Safety Sends Out Conditions.

The American Museum of Safety has just placed in the hands of 1,000 electric railways throughout the United States the conditions of competition for the Anthony N. Brady Memorial Medals. These medals, one of gold with replicas in silver and bronze, are to be awarded annually by the Museum of Safety to the American electric railway company, which for the year of award has done most to conserve the safety and health of the public and of its employees. The gold medal is awarded to the member of the operating staff who has most contributed to the successful record of his company, and the bronze medal to the employee of the company whose services have been of the greatest value in the promotion of health and safety. The first award will be made the latter part of this year and will be based on the records of electric railways for the year ended June 30, 1914.

The New York Times

Published: June 19, 1914

The award program was not held from 1917 to 1925 due to the war. Beginning in 1927 the award program was modified. Now the program was extended to both bus and rail systems and the categories were divided into classes.

- The Gold medal – class A was for systems that operated using more than 5 million vehicle miles per year.
- The Silver replica – class B was for systems with between 1 million to 5 million vehicle miles per year.
- The Bronze replica – class C was given to those agencies with less than 1 million vehicle miles per year.

In 1930 the awards categories were refined; the gold medal became a bronze medal. The bronze medal was divided into two categories for systems with a population of 300,000 or more and a category for systems with a population of 300,000 or less.

In 1941 The American Transit Safety Awards were inaugurated as a continuation of the American Museum of Safety and the Anthony N. Brady Memorial Awards. The award was changed to a silver plaque with six categories. The category breakdown is as follows:

- Category I Companies serving a population of 600,000 and more
- Category II Companies serving a population of 250,000 to 600,000
- Category III Companies serving a population of 150,000 to 250,000
- Category IV Companies serving a population of 100,000 to 150,000
- Category V Companies serving a population of 30,000 to 100,000
- Category VI Composite companies, when the largest urban center served has a population of 30,000 or more.

In 1943 the achievement award was changed to the certificate of honorable mention. In 1991 the Bus Safety Awards were presented in six competitive divisions, based on the service characteristics and operating environment of the transit systems. The classifying variable included weather, population, number of buses in service, bus vehicle miles operated, and the general traffic conditions of the service area. The six divisions were named after past U.S. Secretaries of Transportation.

From 1993 through 1999, an additional award known as the International Award for Continuing Excellence was presented to one transit system that had demonstrated outstanding achievement in bus safety for a continuous period. This award was discontinued after 1999. For the period 1993 through 1999, the International Award for Continuing Excellence was presented to Toronto Transit Commission, Toronto, ON, Canada, in each year.

No safety awards were presented from 2003 – 2006 as the program was being reviewed and revised. Then in 2007 the Improvement Award was eliminated and the Silver Achievement Award was changed to Certificate of Achievement. Lastly a category was added for Private Contractors. 2013 saw the return of the Rail Safety and Security Excellence Awards. The Bus Safety and Security Awards were presented at the Bus and Paratransit and the Rail Safety and Security Excellence Awards at the Rail Conference.

APTA goes to the Movies - The ATA Safety Movies

In 1946 the ATA began producing safety movies that encouraged the public to drive safely on America's roadways. The first movie was called "It's Wanton Murder". What a title! It dealt with a serviceman who had served his country faithfully only to come home and lose his life in a car accident. The movie was narrated by Lowell Thomas, a famous newsman of the time. Mr. Thomas also narrated the second movie "Driven to kill". At the American Transit Safety Awards Banquet in 1948 Lowell Thomas received a plaque for his participation in this safety program. Another celebrity that served as narrator for the ATA safety film was Bob Hope. He narrated the film entitled "Chain Reaction" He is pictured below at the American Transit Association Banquet where he received the silver medallion of appreciation.
